Building Spiritual Muscles: Accountable Discipleship; Part 2

Building physical muscles takes discipline. Going to the gym every now and then will not create strong muscles the way consistent training will. We either discipline ourselves to exercise every day or we hire others such as personal trainers or join an exercise class to keep us disciplined. Having an exercise partner helps us stay disciplined, too. All of these hold us accountable for our physical exercise. To build physical muscles takes disciplined exercise.

Have you ever thought about how one builds spiritual muscles? Or how we build the muscles of our faith? What kind of exercises would we need to do to build spiritual muscles?

And are we self-disciplined or do we need others to help keep us accountable. One of the tenets of Methodism is that it is a practical faith. It is not one that is ethereal or otherworldly. We don't worship a God who is out there somewhere and doesn't care about us. Methodism claims a faith that can be practiced every moment of every day. We can apply it to any situation in our lives. But to do this effectively takes awareness and support. Sometimes it is easier to ignore a situation or deal with it in our own way, than to rely on our spiritual muscles. This is where we need discipline to build and maintain our spiritual muscles. Like building physical muscles, some are great with self-discipline, while others need support. Those who need support can become the accountability partners, offering each other support and encouragement.

As your pastor, I would like to offer us a way to do this. For fifteen years I have participated in accountable discipleship groups. These groups helped to form my faith and live it out in my daily life. I grew deeper in my love for God and broader in sharing that love with others. These groups agreed or covenanted to meet weekly for one hour. We as a group decided which aspects of our faith we needed to practice regularly. Then during the week we would practice it on our own. Our weekly group gatherings were our check-in times. We would then report to each other what we were able or not able to practice. When we succeeded, we rejoiced together. When we weren't as successful, we encouraged each other.

The groups that I participated in used these four areas to build our spiritual muscles: Acts of Worship, Devotion, Compassion, and Justice. We wrote clauses for each "Act" according to where we needed accountability. We also wrote some personal clauses of accountability. Here are some examples:

Acts of Worship:

- We will participate in weekly corporate worship, striving for true involvement, even when we are traveling.
- We will pray for those who lead worship each week, especially the preacher.
- We will pray for those who visit our worship service that they will be touched by God's grace.

Acts of Devotion:

- We will practice daily devotions and record any spiritual insights that we gain which we will share in our group.
- We will pray for our enemies.
- We will read materials and watch programs that will enhance our discipleship.

Acts of Compassion:

- When we are aware of a need, we will do all we can to meet that need.
- We will practice listening to other people as a ministry of grace.
- We will set aside time each month to help those in need in our community.

Acts of Justice:

- When we are aware of an injustice practiced in our church, our community, our nation, and the world, we will seek ways to speak out and act on righting this injustice.
- We will participate in being inclusive.
- We will work toward reconciliation whenever possible.

Jesus' ministry was practical. He practiced God's love everywhere he went. John Wesley saw faith as practical as well. He had three rules for his accountability groups: 1) Do no harm; 2) Do good; 3) Stay connected with God. And each of these areas had specific clauses that defined how to practice these rules. We have a faith that can be applied to our daily lives. How well do we practice it on our own? Or could we practice it more effectively if we did it together?

Each sermon in the Easter season, I will highlight one of these ministry areas. Then following the worship services on Sunday, May 21, I invite anyone who is interested in participating in a group to stay for an orientation. If you cannot be there May 21, but are interested in knowing more, contact me.

I am praying that we at Salem can grow deeper in our faith as we reach further and wider into our community with God's grace.

Yours in Christ,
Rev. Sue

Connecting with our Community: As part of our visioning process, we are trying to find new ways to connect with our community. Ten of us met at the Brookeville Beer Farm. We generated a long list of ideas. Now where do we go from here? Come, join us as we try to focus in on a few of these on Thursday evening, May 18, beginning 5:30 pm at the Green Turtle. Or if you have any ideas, send them to Rev. Sue.

Baltimore-Washington Annual Conference:
May 31-June 2
Marriott-Wardman Park Hotel
Washington, D. C.

Each year the churches in our conference gather for worship and fellowship as well as do the business of the church. Each church sends a lay person with their clergy member to the Annual Conference. Salem will be sending Buck Bartley as our lay member with Rev. Sue. Our new bishop, Latrelle Easterling will be presiding over the AC for the first time. The AC theme is: We Are One: Connected in Covenant. This theme is both biblically based and rooted in our Methodist Heritage. The biblical passage for the AC is Ephesians 4:1-6.

“Therefore, as a prisoner for the Lord, I encourage you to live as people worthy of the call you received from God. Conduct yourselves with all humility, gentleness, and patience. Accept each other with love, and make an effort to preserve the unity of the Spirit with the peace that ties you together. You are one body and one spirit, just as God also called you in one hope. There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of all, who is over all, through all, and in all.”

OUR SEMINARY INTERN

In last month's Newsletter, Sam and Alex said their farewells to Salem. Their final official worship service was April 30. Salem said their goodbyes as to Sam. Alex had to work. On May 6, Sam will be graduating with a Masters of Divinity from Wesley Theological Seminary.

We sent her away with a small reception, a cake and a gift.

Since she will be serving as a chaplain in a hospital, she will need a portable communion set. We wish both of them Godspeed and a “keep in touch, we love you.”

Sam's contact information:
Samantha.Gangwer@gmail.com,

Sam with her gift from the congregation- a travel communion set.

Easter Sunday was a very busy day at Salem. At 7 am we gathered at Salem Cemetery for a glorious Sunrise Service. The weather was perfect, nice and warm without a cloud in the sky.

HOLY WEEK WORSHIP SERVICES

Ashton United Methodist Church was the scene for our Thursday evening worship service. There were stations around the room to visit and take part of worshipping our Savior. Pausing at each table and observing the many things our Lord may have done before his arrest and trial.

Salem's youth were in charge of the service and did an excellent job of proclaiming "He is risen indeed!" (As publisher, I wish I had enough room to print all the pictures, but space is limited.) Everyone was invited back to the Community Hall for breakfast and fellowship.

Good Friday found us at Salem for a Tenebrae Service. The Crucifixion story was read in fourteen parts. After each part a candle was extinguished until only the Christ Candle remained. The joint church choirs sang beautifully under the direction of our Music Director, Rose Edie-Altman. The message was one of sorrow as Jesus was tortured and hung on the tree. Silence fell over the congregation as we left the building – waiting for the glorious day when we can shout with joy HE IS RISEN _ HE IS RISEN INDEED!

The children were ready long before the 9:30 am Easter Egg hunt; almost as anxious as Christmas morning! Again the young people had the pleasure of hiding the eggs for the younger children who would have the fun of finding them. Needless to say – Fun was had by all!

The Sanctuary looked very nice with the display of flowers. The music was outstanding and set the mood for rejoicing: "He lives, He lives, Christ Jesus lives today." The message reminded us why we celebrate Easter and we left worship feeling the joy of our salvation.

Rev. Sue is holding Easter bunny, Matthew. Debbie is holding Easter bunny, Jacob.

SIGN-UP FOR ALTAR FLOWERS

If you would like to provide flowers during the 2017 worship year, please sign up on the list posted on the bulletin board in the Hallway.

When signing up, please indicate if the flowers are a tribute (for example: from the Jones family in honor of John's 10th birthday). Tributes will be listed in the Sunday announcements.

Purchase your flowers at the vendor of your choice and bring by Saturday afternoon. Call Rev. Sue before you head out so she can open the church for you. Contact Suzanne Friis with questions.

FROM THE CONGREGATION

This location for the month of May is being dedicated to Jacob Savage. I know many of our readers are not in "town" and are not familiar with "our" Savage Twins. We at Salem have waited and prayed along with Debbie and Brandon. Mathew is fine but his twin is very sick and in need of a liver transplant in able to survive. The following story will introduce you to the family but first let's talk about the upcoming fundraiser:

Fundraiser for Jacob Savage: One-year old Jacob Savage is in need of a liver transplant. Funds are being raised through the Children's Organ Transplant Association. Donations can be made directly to COTA (cota.org) to his account at and/or support a fundraiser at Green Turtle on Thursday, May 18. Coupons are needed for Green Turtle and can be found on the back page of this newsletter. Invite and share the coupons with friends and neighbors.

One bit of fun in it all was the ladies who once again conspired to surprise our men by wearing hats. The display of hats reminds yours truly of the song "Easter Parade" from the 1948 movie by the same name. I cannot leave the cutest out - I must show the Savage Twins in their Easter Bonnets.

In a blog Debbie set up to keep people informed, she wrote Thanksgiving 2016 (quoting):

A year ago at Thanksgiving we had just found out that we were expecting twins, and high-risk momo twins at that. We announced the pregnancy to family on Thanksgiving Day, but the fear that the momo status would keep us from meeting our twins was crippling.

This year at Thanksgiving we are faced with the harsh reality that our son Jacob needs a liver transplant to survive. We spent Tuesday at Georgetown University Hospital meeting with the transplant team who will get him listed and work with us to save our boy's life.

It has been quite a year with such extreme challenges: a momo pregnancy and inpatient stay, losing my father to cancer while I was on bedrest, the NICU stay for both of our boys, transitioning to being parents of twins, unpaid maternity leave, 7 months of seeking a diagnosis for Jacob's jaundice and liver disease, and several hospitalizations. Through all things, we are thankful for the blessings that have been in our lives through it all: the kindness of family, our church, incredible support we received for our gofundme campaign, top notch hospitals near our home, our amazing au pair, the joy that capturing two boys smiling at once brings. Just yesterday, someone from church dropped off a Christmas wreath to help us celebrate the holiday season despite the stress in our lives. And on Wednesday, a package arrived with Christmas stockings picked out for each member of our family and one for our au pair as well. There is such beauty in the way that friends support each other in hard times.

This holiday season, we are thankful for family and for our hope in God who has carried us through the hardest year of our lives. From our family to yours, happy Thanksgiving.

Since this post, Jacob has been in and out of hospitals, on two transplant lists and literally fighting for his life.

The following picture was posted on the blog this week with the following post: Jacob is still in the hospital. He's having some issues breathing and is on oxygen to help with that. He's hanging in there, but the bottom line is they're just trying to keep him stable as we wait for his miracle. We were able to visit him for a few hours both Saturday and Sunday with Matthew, and it was really nice to have a chance for the whole family to be together. Our "normal" routine is for one parent to visit Jacob one night after work while the other one takes care of Matthew at home, and then we switch the next day. We kept Matthew occupied by visiting the fish tanks on the floor. The hospital wing Jacob is in has an ocean theme.

Yesterday, we were also able to take a trip to the National Arboretum for a picnic and to see the azaleas blooming. We had a nice time, but we were sure missing Jacob!

Fundraising Concert:

The Encore Singers and
The Mighty Kelltones Present
“Madrigals & Music of the Dance”

Each year The Encore Singers and The Mighty Kelltones schedule their last concert of the spring season at Salem as a fund raiser for the ASP team.

This is a free concert with the hopes that the guests will make a freewill donation to the ASP team for their traveling expenses. The ASP Team is very appreciative of their help.

I heard the concert called “A Night to Remember.” The music from both groups was toe-tapping all through the program. Sharing the “spotlight” with each taking a turn, they were amazing with such tunes as “My Bonny Lass,” “Lieberlieder Walzer. Op 52. Nos. 4, 8, 13 and 11,” and “They Can’t Take That Away From Me” plus many, many more by The Encore Singers.

The Mighty Kelltones entertained us with, to name just a few: “Tennessee Waltz,” “ElAcomado,” and with lead guitarist Bill Bates’ “Minor Swing.” There were many more great moments in music, it was sad when the music ended. But, we left with a song in our hearts!

During a sort of break in the music, members of the ASP team spoke about their experiences helping people that are not able to help themselves with home repair and other construction work. While they spoke, slides were shown from last year’s team hard at work.

Thank you to all who came, to the Encore Singers, and The Mighty Kelltones. The concert raised $880 for our ASP teams!

BOOK CLUB

The next meeting of the Book Club will be Tuesday, May 9th at 7:30 pm at Suzanne Friss house. Our selection is:

THE REASON FOR GOD: Brief in the Age of Skepticism by Timothy Keller. Non-fiction.

Timothy Keller, the founding pastor of Redeemer Presbyterian Church in New York City, addresses the frequent doubts that skeptics, and even ardent believers, have about religion. Using literature, philosophy, real-life conversations, and potent reasoning, Keller explains how the belief in a Christian God is, in fact, a sound and rational one. To true believers he offers a solid platform on which to stand their ground against the backlash to religion created by Age of Skepticism. And to skeptics, atheists, and agnostics, he provides a challenging argument for pursuing the reason for God.

MEMORY GARDEN

Celebrating Birthdays: And last of all, Helen Van Druff and the Savage Twins, Matthew and Jacob celebrated their birthdays on April 22. Helen celebrated 98 years, and the twins celebrated their first. They were able to meet for a photo where one of our eldest meets the youngest of our congregation. We wish them many more wonderful years to celebrate together.
